1.	Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow: I have lived in Rishikesh for 15 years and have seen the shift in the mind-set of India's younger generation. While they are patriotic, prepared to Join any movement, march, wave political flags, join Facebook groups, they are not, in most cases, convinced India's culture. In fact, they ask questions that evidence their dissatisfaction with and disinterest in what we call culture, values and sanskars.
	"Why can't we date before marriage? Why do we live in a joint family? I believe in God but not in temples or puja. Why can't my parents understand? They are turning from vegetarians to non-vegetarians, from teetotallers to drinkers, from obedient to rebellious young adults at alarming rates. And at the same time, parents say: "What's wrong with our children? They are going astray.
	My academic background is psychology from Stanford University hence I am used to doing analysis. I came to India at the age of 25, having grown up in Los Angeles, in the heart of American upper class 'modern' culture and was so filled with delight by the grace, the truth, the divinity, and the depth of traditional Indian culture that despite protests from people back home-I stayed. I have seen both the worlds, up close hip American culture where acceptance is based on how you look in a black mini-skirt; how many times a week you're seen drinking coffee past 2 am in the local 'hot spot'; how many drug-filled dens you visit on a Saturday night. And I have seen the results. Fifteen-year-olds killed in drunken driving accidents, night after night of sleeplessness stealing the minds of Ivy-League students, third marriages by 25, a country where the most commonly prescribed medicines are anti-depressants, anti-anxiety medication and sleeping pills There is much to be emulated about Western culture-its commitment to excellence and perfection, punctuality, reliability, fulfilment of promises, adherence to contracts, integrity and honesty-attributes which other countries like India would benefit by adopting. But tragically, what is being adopted by metropolitan Indian youth is the illusion of (not real) sophistication allure of glamour, myth of material enjoyment that is seeping into Indian culture. India's culture, values, ethics and traditions form the foundation of a successful, meaningful and fulfilling life. If you ask a person in Los Angeles, stepping out of her Mercedes, "How are you?" Chances are you will get in reply a list of complaints- "My back is hurting the housekeeper (maid) didn't show up, the store ran out of my favourite cereal; too much traffic on the road "Put the same question to an elderly Indian, and the chances are your question will be answered with "Sub Bhagwan ki kripa hai". This is the fruit of culture: deep satisfaction despite ups and downs of daily life. Apparently, God's kripa seems to those in previous generations. Information is at their fingertips. Modern science and technology have rendered the inexplicable and impossible a decade ago child's play today. We cannot expect them to accept "because I said so" or "because God made it that way Most middle-aged Indians today would never have dared disobey or question their parents Therefore, their children's continuous chant of "why?" seems insolent and disrespectful. Today's youth have been raised to wonder, to question, to investigate, to discover Give them scientific, rational, pragmatic reasons to be vegetarian. Explain that the meat industry is the single largest contributor to world hunger as well as environmental destruction, India is the richest country in the world in its depth of culture, values, ethics and tradition. The values and ethics of centuries ago are just as valid and applicable today as then. We only have to explain them differently.
	Answer the following questions, based on the above passage. 1. What is being adopted by metropolitan Indian youth
